Mokena Village Water Declared Unfit To Drink; Plan A New Circulating Water System

The village water of Mokena has been declared unfit to drink and Dr. E. G. McMahan of Mokena, appeared before the village board Tuesday night and stated that in June the State Water Board had advised the village board, that the water was unfit for use and nothing further had been heard about the matter. The State Officials wrote to Dr. McMahan asking him what action the board had or was taking to correct the condition.

Dr. McMahan told the board that grave danger exists in the use of the water for drinking purposes, inasmuch as an infection might develop which might lead to stomach disorders of a grave nature. He also pointed out that if the village did not do something to clear up the water supply and prevent continued contamination, anyone becoming ill from drinking the village water could bring a suit for damages against the village and that the state water board would back up the plaintiff.

It developed that there is a leak in the pit of the well in which the pump is located and that waste water instead of being drained out of the pit flows back into the well and thus aids in contaminating the water, but the chief cause of the contamination of the water supply is the fact that there are too many dead ends in the water main system which causes the water to become stagnant and polluted.

In order to overcome all this difficulty it will be necessary for the village to connect up all the dead ends into a circulating water system.

About 5100 feet of new water main would have to be laid to perfect the circulating water system.

Mr. McCoy, of the firm of Mulford & McCoy, of Chicago Heights, village engineers, said that Mokena Village Board might be able to get PWA aid in installing the circulating water system. He pointed out that the government would pay for the labor and about one-third of the material cost. The material cost would be $5,000 of better, of which amount Mr. McCoy thought the government might pay $2,000 of better. The balance of the material cost could be met by the village, with the issuance of water certificates spread over a 20-year period.

The water department, however, would be operated entirely independent of other village departments and the revenue raised from the sale of water is to be used in paying off the water certificates. Mr. McCoy pointed out that this improvement project cannot be built by special assessments as special assessment bonds are no longer saleable.

The village board decided to take immediate action on the matter and Mr. McCoy was asked to prepare the necessary papers and maps and estimates which he presented to the PWA headquarters in Joliet before the deadline Thursday night of this week.

Mr. McCoy, presenting the project, showed that the work is an emergency matter and that the health of the village depends a great deal upon getting a pure water supply.

As soon as a report is received from the PWA headquarters the village engineer will notify the village board. In case the project fails to get PWA support other measures will have to be considered.

Steal 11 Head Of Cattle From New Lenx Farm

Cattle stealing is on the increase in Will county and New Lenox township appears to be the favorite location for the operations of the cattle rustlers.

The latest theft of 11 head of two year old purebred Hereford cows from a herd of 200 on the farm of Fred H. Scheel, Chicago utilities official northeast of New Lenox, was reported to the office of Sheriff Michael Breen of Will County the forepart of this week.

The farm of 1000 acres is operated only as grazing land for the blooded cattle, according to Clarence Mast, manager. Much of the acreage is woodland and rustlers could work in comparative isolation in cutting out a number of the stock and taking them away.

Armed patrolling of the land will be undertaken to prevent a recurrence of the cattle rustling.

Former New Lenox And Orland Twp. Resident Dies

Miss Jane Parmalee, 86 years old, well known former New Lenox resident and retired school teacher, died at the Will county farm Tuesday morning following a lingering illness. She was born in Orland township, June 26, 1849 and had been a resident of this vicinity all her life.

A nephew, R. L. Parmalee of Chicago is the only survivor. Funeral services were held Tuesday morning at the Wunderlich and Harris funeral parlors in Joliet with interment in the Orland cemetery.

CAR WRECKED 2 HURT WHEN TIRE BLOWS UP

A Nash sedan was wrecked and two of its three occupants were seriously injured Sunday morning when the tire on the right hind wheel blew up while the car was going 50 miles an hour on the Lincoln Highway east of Frankfort.

When the tire blew out the car swerved across the pavement, hit an earth bank and overturned five times. An army officer of the 18th U. S. Infantry of Fort Hamilton, New York was driving the car. He escaped injury but his wife sustained injuries to the right shoulder and was badly cut and bruised. Another man, the owner of the car who gave his address as LaSalle, Ill., suffered a fractured pelvis and possibly internal injuries.

The accident occurred near the George Geuther, Jr., farm and both Mr. and Mrs. Geuther heard the crash and were the first on the scene of the accident. Other motorists who came by shortly afterward stopped and a state highway policeman who was cruising the highway came on the scene shortly after the crash and gave the injured first aid.

As Chicago Heights was considered the nearest point for a hospital, the injured were taken to the St. James hospital in that city.

The automobile was a total wreck. The car was equipped with shatter-proof glass which probably saved the occupants of the car from being more seriously injured.

Mokena Church Will Observe Anniversaries Sept. 8

Immanuel Lutheran Congregation, Mokena, celebrates 85th anniversary of its organization and 20th anniversary of the dedication of present church building.

On November 4, 1850 a small group of German immigrants who had settled near Frankfort organized as a congregation. A small frame church was built and Pastor Weiler was called to serve them with Word and Sacrament. Caspar Wannenmacher, John Geuther and Henry Werner were elected to serve as trustees. Sixty-five years passed away.

During the pastorate of Rev. E. Heiber Sr., in 1915 the congregation decided to move to Mokena. The present church building was erected there during that year.

The Rev. R. Reinke was called to serve the congregation in their new house of worship. Three years later, the first resident pastor, Rev. W. J. Kennitz was called. Pastor D. C. Hennig served from 1924 to 1930; Rev. P. Schauer from 1930 to 1932. The present pastor, Rev. W. J. Gelfert took office in 1932.

Otto Bartels, William Hentsch and Geo. Abbe are the present elders of the congregation.

ANNIVERSARY PROGRAM FOR NEXT SUNDAY SEPT. 8th.

At three o'clock in the afternoon, a double service will be held. The Rev. Alex Ullrich, president of the North Illinois District of the Missouri Synod, will deliver the German address. Rev. W. J. Kennitz, former pastor of Immanuel Church, will preach the English sermon.

The ladies of the congregation will serve a supper in the church basement at 5 o'clock.

An English service will be held at 8 p. m. The Rev. R. L. Sommer of Chicago will deliver the sermon.

Appropriate music will beautify both afternoon and evening services. We welcome all friends of Immanuel Church to attend this celebration.

Firemen Picnic Rained Out; Will Hold It Sunday

The weather man put a wet blanket on Labor Day celebrations and the annual picnic and dance sponsored by the Orland Park Volunteer Fire Department was rained out, but the firemen being used to water will not let a mere wetting stop them, so they have planned to give the picnic and dance this coming Sunday afternoon and evening, Sept. 8 in the forest preserve on 143 street in Orland Park. Everyone is cordially invited to attend.

The Firemen promise a good time for all who come.

He plans to put on a sale in the near future which Mr. Cohen states will be one of the largest sales seen in Joliet. IS ROBBED OF $260 AND HELD BY BANDITS

A story of being held captive for more than 24 hours and robbed of $260 by three armed bandits was related to Will county sheriff's deputies Sunday night by Charles L. Grimes, 37 years old, 2329 North Kenneth avenue, Chicago.

Grimes, bearing bruises on his forehead which he said were the result of having been struck by a blackjack wielded by one of his captors, told his story in New Lenox early Sunday night shortly after having been set free by the bandits, who he said gave him 50 cents and six cigarettes.

The Chicagoan told Deputies Hartford and Black that he was employed as a truck driver for a Chicago baking company. He was returning to Chicago late Saturday afternoon, he said, when, near the village of Addison while driving on the Mannheim road, the battery terminals on the machine became loose. He stopped for repairs, he said, and a few minutes later a black Ford sedan drove alongside the truck and three men leaped from the car, one of them informing him "we want your jack."

The truck driver said the bandit leader then struck him with a blackjack and he was pushed into the car. He said he was kept on the floor of the machine and was driven around until about midnight, when the car was stopped before a small country cottage situated in a wood ed grove.

He said he was ordered into the house and kept there until 6 o'clock Sunday night. He said his captors gave him a sandwich after taking $260 in five, 10 and 20-dollar bills from him. He was finally driven away from the place and released about two miles northeast of New Lenox, he said. He then walked to New Lenox and called the sheriff's office, according to his statement.

The following description of the holdup men and kidnapers was given by Grimes:

The first man was about 5 feet 11 inches tall, about 35 years old and of about 180 pounds, wore grey suit, red neck tie, black hair pompadour style, dark complexion and rather good looking.

The second man was about 5 feet 7, about 165 pounds, apparently 24 years old, wore blue serge suit, no tie, faded green shirt, black hair parted on side, dark complexion and tough looking.

The third man was probably a brother of the second one. He was about 5 feet 8, of about 150 pounds about 22 years old. Wore brown suit blue tie with white dots, white shirt, black hair parted on side; dark complexion.

The first described man had a .45 caliber pistol and the other two had automatics.

The car they drove was a Ford V8 with a green stripe and had no license plates.

Grimes went to the county jail at Joliet and waited there for his brother who came from Chicago about 10:30 a. m., Monday and took him home to his family.

The body of Joseph Flores, thirty-eight years old, section hand for the Alton railroad, who disappeared after drawing his pay, was found floating in a creek in the Glen yards of the railroad near Willow Springs. Apparently he had been slain.

A crowd estimated at 25,000 persons stood in silence for 30 seconds at a tribute to Will Rogers and Wiley Post after Gov. Henry Horner, attending Veterans' day at the Illinois state fair, had delivered a glowing eulogy of the two men.

Complete rehabilitation of the Great Lakes Naval Training station was assured with the announcement from Washington that $200,000 additional in federal works progress administration funds had been allotted for the work. At the same time the office of Robert J. Dunham, WPA administrator for Illinois, disclosed that it had approved nine Illinois projects for which $2,085,580 in federal funds is being requested.

Department of Justice officials in Washington said that M. F. Dunlap, Jacksonville banker sentenced to two years in the federal penitentiary for bank irregularities, had been denied both a parole and a pardon. Dunlap now is in the Springfield, Mo., detention home, serving the two year sentence to which was added a $10,000 fine. He entered the detention home August 8, 1934, and on April 7, this year, applied for the parole. Officials refused to give reasons why his application was rejected.

The yoke of oxen that James E. Dugan of Rock Island purchased at A Century of Progress in Chicago more or less as a joke a year ago, have found a fitting place in the farm life on one of Rock Island county's most modern farms owned by Dugan. The daily chores for the primitive farm animals include pulling farm implements from low sheds and replacing them daily. The shed roofs are too low for horses. Dugan has under construction six silos which he says will be the largest in either Illinois or Iowa. Each will be 24 feet in diameter and 50 feet in height, with a capacity of 500 tons of silage each. Dugan feeds 2,000 head of cattle.

Work projects on which 6,000 Illinois college students may receive aid from the National Youth administration were announced by William J. Campbell, state NYA director. More than $200,000 will be expended on the projects. Under the new NYA, a maximum of 12 per cent of the college enrollment last October may receive aid during the 1935-'36 school year. On the basis of the college population of the state at that time, Mr. Campbell estimated that 6,000 will be eligible. Average earnings of students receiving aid last year under the Illinois Emergency Relief commission and the Federal Emergency Relief administration was $12.27 per month. "Work projects for worthy students will be one of the principal aims of the youth administration," Mr. Campbell said. "The plan will offer students, both high school and college, an opportunity to work." The student work projects are to be developed within the various educational institutions, subject to the approval of the NYA. The projects will include such work as recataloging of libraries, research and similar duties which cannot be handled through the regular school appropriations. No manual work will be entailed. Students desiring aid will make application through their respective schools, Mr. Campbell said. A qualified college student will be able to earn about $15 a month and a high school student $6.

The Chicago sanitary district board took definite action toward the construction of a $5,000,000 intercepting sewer along the Des Plaines river from Pershing road to Dempster street, to serve all towns along the river in that area and free the river from waste.

LIGHTFOOT WATCHES AND WAITS

THERE had been a great change in Lightfoot the Deer. Peter Rabbit had noticed it. Sammy Jay had noticed it. So had Blacky the Crow. All three of them understood it. They understood it perfectly. They knew that Lightfoot was watching and waiting for the day which would bring into the Green Forest the hunters with terrible guns seeking to kill him.

As long as the leaves had remained green Lightfoot had wandered about where he pleased, careless of who saw him. He had even visited Farmer coming of the hunters with terrible guns. Sometimes he wished they would come. It would be easier to know what to do. Nothing, you know, is harder than watching and waiting as Lightfoot was doing. He lost his appetite. He could no longer sleep peacefully, but continually awoke with fright. Each day he became more anxious. No sooner was one day ended than he would begin to dread the coming of another day. It was very beautiful in the Green Forest, but Lightfoot saw none of the beauty. Fear destroyed all beauty for Lightfoot.

Peter Rabbit Had Noticed It.

Brown's garden in broad daylight. He had joined Farmer Brown's cows in the Old Pasture and grazed with them contentedly. He had been free of fear.

But now, Lightfoot was like another creature. He didn't seem at all the same animal. It was rarely that he moved about much until after the Black Shadows had crept out from the Purple Hills. It was then that he fed and visited his favorite drinking place at the Laughing Brook. But from the time the first Jolly Little Sunbeam came creeping through the Green Forest at the beginning of day until the Black Shadows chased them out at the beginning of night, Lightfoot remained hidden in thickets or behind tangles of fallen trees in the depths of the Green Forest.

Sometimes he would lie for hours in his hiding place. Sometimes he would stand motionless for the longest time, his big ears cocked forward to catch every little sound, his great, soft eyes watching for the least little movement among the trees, his delicate nose testing every Merry Little Breeze that came his way for the dreaded scent of man.

When he moved about he took the greatest care to move silently. Every few steps he stopped to look, listen and test the air. The snapping of a twig would set him to trembling with fear and suspicion.

Lightfoot was watching and waiting for the coming of the most dreadful thing that can come into the lives of the people of the Green Forest, the

THE FAMILY
REUNION

By ANNE CAMPBELL

THE family reunion will be held again this year. Once more we will renew the mellow friendships, tried and dear. Almost a hundred years ago, this homestead was a dream. A plan told in the candleglow that made young glances gleam.

If these brick walls could speak, they'd tell a tale of love grown old; A cycle of warm hearts that blessed its hospitable fold.

A hundred years, a hundred souls that gather once again. To testify to far-flung goals, and happy wives and men.

The family reunion! Heaven throws blue skies above! The day is touched with gold that is so wound about with love. And for each guest assembled here, there are too many more That are so far and yet so near, upon a trackless shore.

God bless the family! Make strong its deep, abiding ties. Love that is tended keeps the warmth and beauty that we prize; And even sunset skies are red with cheer in winter weather. When good friends gather, comforted, around a fire together! Copyright.—WNU Service.

Truly yours,

G. RUSELEM.

Answer: As he is so annoying with his persistency the best thing to do is this: The next time he asks you what a miracle is, ask him to turn around. The minute he does, give him a swift kick, then ask him if he felt the kick. When he says yes, say to him: "Well if you hadn't, that would be a miracle."

Deep Wells

Paris is boasting that it has now the deepest well in the world. This new source of supply for the north-eastern corner of the city is sunk 2,850 feet and will yield 1,600,000 gallons a day. The well is fed from a sheet of subterranean water that extends at a variable depth under the French capital. A writer in the London Spectator says that the water has its source in the Ardennes mountains. The existence of this reservoir has long been known; a hundred years ago several localities availed themselves of it.

SYNOPSIS

To the little town of Heron River comes Anna ("Silver") Grenoble, daughter of "Gentleman Jim," formerly of the community known as Chicago, news of whose murder in Chicago has reached the town. Sophronia Willard, Jim Grenoble's sister, is at the depot to meet Silver. Her household consists of her husband, and stepsons, Roderick and Jason. The Willards own only half of the farm, the other half being Anna Grenoble's. On Silver's arrival Duke Melbank, shiftless youth, makes himself obnoxious. Roderick is on the eve of marriage to Corinne Meader. Silver declares her eagerness to live with her aunt, on the farm, and will not sell her portion. She meets Roddy, by chance, that night. Silver tells Sophronia ("Phronie," by request) something—but by no means all—of her relations with Gerald Lucas, gambler friend of her father. Roddy marries Corinne, and brings her home. Corinne has a maid, Paula, who seems to attract Jason. Silver again meets Gerald Lucas, who has established a gambling resort near the town. She is compelled to introduce him to Corinne Willard much against her will.

"Corinne Willard?" Gerald repeated. "And where have you been all my life?"

"Where nice girls always are," Corinne replied archly. "Living at home with mother."

"Just a nice, old-fashioned girl," Gerald bantered amiably. "Well, come along out to Emerald bay some night when mother isn't around. Bring her out with you, Silver."

Silver stepped to the side of the car. "Gerald," she said, "you're going to be late for your appointment. And besides—"

"Right-o, Silver!" Gerald put in immediately. "I was forgetting. See you both later."

The car shot into the road and vanished beyond the thicket where the highway turned to the south.

"Well—I must say—you have a way of dismissing people—" Corinne observed.

"I just happen to know Gerald," Silver said quietly.

"So I have heard," Corinne remarked. "He's not at all what I imagined him. And he is awfully good-looking, isn't he?"

Silver was thoughtful for a moment.

"Corinne," she said at last, "I don't want Gerald around here at all."

"Well, it's no affair of mine, my dear," Corinne said lazily, and began calling to her dog, who was exploring the underbrush on the hill.

Something deep within Silver trembled. She saw Corinne turn away and go toward the house. From among the shadows under the great oak came the sound of Jason playing a quaint old lullaby. The music, mingling with the unbroken churring of the frogs, seemed to come from far away, from a past of half-remembered, half-forgotten things.

CHAPTER VI

Just before sundown, Silver rode out to bring the cattle in from the pasture. On the way home she paused beside a stripped field of barley where the men were at work. A couple of them waved to her. Jason stood on one stack, pitching the sheaves to the man who fed the machine. Roddy stood beside the separator, attending to the bagging of the grain as it flowed from the spout. He waved to her and Silver, waving back, remembered irreverently that Corinne had not been present at the midday meal. She had gone to luncheon at the Richters', in their cottage on Twin Deer lake.

Silver shook her bridle rein and was about to turn away when she heard a scream from the field. She swung around quickly and saw Roddy jump toward a tow-headed youth who was standing near him. The engine stopped instantly and the men hurried to where Roddy was leaning over the boy. Silver slipped down from her horse and in a moment had crept under the fence and was beside Roddy. The boy had stumbled and caught two fingers of one hand in a cog-wheel of the threshing machine. The fingers were two bloody tatters hanging from the hand. The boy was lying on the ground now, his face a deathlike pallor under the sunburn, his lips writhing back from his clenched teeth.

"Where's the first-aid kit?" Roddy shouted to the men who were crowding about him.

Jason had already gone in search of it. "D—n it, we've forgotten it!" he called as he came running back.

Roddy looked up. "Has anyone a clean handkerchief?"

Nobody responded. Silver had knelt beside Roddy, who was keeping a vise-like grip on the bleeding hand.

"Use this, Roddy," she said quickly, and whipped off her clean white linen blouse. With her shoulders bared to the rosy light of the low sun, she tore the material into strips and gave them to Roddy while he made a bandage and a tourniquet for the boy's mangled hand.

"All right, Jimmie!" Roddy said at last, and lifted the boy gently to his feet. "Start the truck, Jason. You'd better go down to Maynard and let Doc Woodward attend to it."

In a minute the truck had rattled away. It had all happened so quickly, it seemed to Silver that she had scarcely ly drawn a breath. Roddy was coming back to her from the wagon that stood off a short distance from the threshing machine. He was carrying his own grimy jacket. She permitted him to button it up to her breast, while she thrust her hands down into the pockets in an effort to control their trembling.

"That wasn't very pleasant, was it?" he said with a grim smile. "But those things happen now and then." When she did not reply, he laid his hand on her shoulder. "You were a brick, Silver—to do what you did. But you're pretty unstrung. Perhaps you'd better ride home in the wagon with me. Rusty will find his way back alone."

In another moment, she knew, she would burst into nervous tears. Without looking at him she said hurriedly, "No, thanks, Roddy. I'm—all right."

She turned away abruptly and rushed back to the fence, crawled under it and called to the horse, who had wandered off a short distance.

All the way home, beneath Silver's shuddering memory of the ragged clods of the boy's fingers, dwelt the thought of Roddy's dark face and his kindling, changed eyes.

While Roddy was washing in the tin basin on the bench outside the house—placed there for the use of the crew—Phronie came out of the kitchen.

"What's this I hear about the Healy boy?" she asked. "What happened?"

Roddy told her. "Well, I declare it just seems something like to happen every year," Phronie said. "And he's such a nice boy, too. Well, hurry up and get washed. Supper is ready."

"Is Corinne home yet?" Roddy asked. "She's upstairs changin' her clothes. Have you seen Silver anywhere? She went to fetch the cows, but I haven't seen her since."

Roddy told her then of the part Silver had played in getting the boy ready to go to Maynard with Jason.

"Well—that girl beats me!" Phronie declared. "But then—she's just like her mother. I remember—"

"You'd better go in and look after things, ma," Roddy interrupted.

Roddy hastened upstairs to put on clean clothing before he sat down to supper. On the landing he met Corinne. She was dressed in a clinging green chiffon gown that came almost to her beautifully shod feet.

"Hello, lovely!" he greeted her in a low voice.

She laughed and ruffled his hair. "There's a corn roast and a dance over at the lake tonight, darling," she told him. "I thought I might as well dress now. Aren't you going to kiss me?"

Roddy grinned, then drew her to him and kissed her throat.

"You've washed already?" she asked, surprised. "Don't tell me you washed in that tin basin outside."

"Certainly. Why not? I've done it for years."

"You have a bathroom upstairs, haven't you?"

"Listen, kid," he protested. "You don't know it, but the men are funny about such things. I don't want them to feel—well, you know what I mean."

"I don't know at all," she objected. "I should think—"

He swung her to him and held her close for a moment. "You're much too pretty to talk to me in that tone," he remonstrated. "Go on down—I'll be with you in a jiffy."

But as soon as he had left her, his mood grew sober again. He could not forget young Jim Healy and his poor crushed hand. Then, curiously, with an obscure lightening of his spirit, there came to him the vision of Silver Grenoble, in her riding breeches, kneeling there on the field in the sunset, her shoulders bare above a plain silk bodice. Perhaps he had been all wrong about her. Perhaps she belonged here as essentially as he did himself.

Roddy entered the dining room. Before he took his place at the table, he glanced over at Corinne, faintly presiding at its head and smiling graciously upon her overalled and plaid-shirted guests. Phronie and Paula stood, one on either side of the table, serving the men when necessary, or replenishing some dish or other from the kitchen. Silver had remained at the stone house, to make supper for old Roderick, who had not been feeling well for the past week.

It was Corinne's first appearance at table with the threshing crew. Roddy winced, in spite of himself, as he saw her draw back quickly when a brawny arm reached across her bosom in a lunge toward the butter dish. Finally someone made a too graphic comment on the day's accident, and Corinne covered her eyes. It was the last time she sat at the table with the men.

An evening or two later, Roddy returned from visiting the Healy boy to find Corinne impatiently awaiting him.

"I thought you'd never get back," she complained as soon as he entered the house.

"What's wrong?" he asked.

"The Richters called up this afternoon and I promised we'd be over tonight. It's their last party before they go back to town."

"Corrie," Roddy said in a voice that was slow with weariness, "I've been out to parties till I'm ready to drop. I'm fed up with it. How do you expect a man to do his work and go out to some d—n fool party four of five times a week?"

For a moment there was silence. Then Corinne said, "But I promised them we'd be there."

"I can't help it," Roddy protested. "If you want to go, take the car and run over for an hour or so. I'm so doggone tired I could—"

"Harry and his sister will come for me—if you won't take me," Corinne replied distantly.

"Corrie!" Her name, as he uttered it, was a vehement plea. But she did not answer. She had already left the room and gone into the hall to telephone.

Roddy sat for a minute where he was and listened to Corinne's voice as she talked to Harry Richter and made her own elaborate excuses for her husband. Then he got up and went to the kitchen.

He was sitting there a half hour later when Corinne came and stood in the kitchen doorway. She was dressed for the party. Roddy looked up.

"Give my regards to Harry," he said, "and tell him to bring you home early."

Corinne frowned. "I didn't think you could be so stubborn."

Roddy got up and put his arm about her. "It isn't stubbornness, dear," he said quietly. "Lord, can't you tell when a man is dog-tired?"

"You're not too tired to go, if you really wanted to," she persisted. "It's just that you don't like the people who are going to be there."

"Well—they're not my idea of a steady diet, exactly," he admitted.

She drew her lips tight as she returned his look. "You are very funny sometimes," she said coldly. "I simply can't understand you."

"Don't try, kid," he said and patted her on the shoulder. "Go ahead and have a good time. I'll put in a couple of hours checking up on that new corn."

"I Don't Know at All," She Objected. "I Should Think—"

"You're not too tired for that," she retorted.

"But that has to be done," he told her. "There's Harry now."

There was the sound of a car coming to a stop before the door. Corinne turned away immediately and was gone. Roddy went to the window and watched until the car was out of sight.

Silver gathered her tweed jacket about her and seated herself beside a clump of Juneberry bushes on the hill. It was quite late, but she had been unable to go to bed on such a night as this.

It did not seem possible that Gerald Lucas could be only a few miles away. She found herself wondering, idly, what he would do to amuse himself presently with the leisure his new enterprise would give him. His effort to restore their relationship would not be repeated, she knew. He had not made any attempt to communicate with her during the past several days, and so far as Silver knew, Corinne had not met him again. But that moment in the sultry moon-rise, when Corinne and Gerald had looked at each other for the first time, remained in her mind still, haunting and ominous.

There was a sound of someone moving out of the brush to the left. Silver glanced up and saw Roddy standing a few feet away, looking down at her.

"Why Roddy!" she exclaimed. "I thought you and Corinne had gone to the party."

For a moment he hesitated. "Corinne went," he told her. "The Richters came for her." He sat down near by. "I took a night off and spent it bringing some of my records up to date."

"I wish," said Silver wistfully, "that I had studied plant pathology and those things instead of languages. Every time I go into your laboratory I feel so darned inferior!"

He laughed indulgently.

"Well, you're certainly young enough to learn," he remarked, "if you're still bent on being a farmer. And it's beginning to look as though you are."

He got his pipe from his overall pocket, packed and lighted it. "Except that you ought to be in bed at this hour. You worked pretty hard today, Phronie told me."

"This is lots better than sleeping," Silver said, and waved her hand toward the clouds of mist that were drifting low under the waning moon.

"And not such a waste of time," he declared. "When I saw you walking up here I was leaving the shop—I thought I'd sneak along and get an eyeful of it for myself."

They sat in silence watching the thin wreaths blending, parting, blending in the hollows below.

"You were over to see the Healy boy today, weren't you?" Silver asked finally. "I was thinking about him today. Couldn't we give a barn dance or something and collect enough money to pay Doctor Woodward?" The Micheners told me the Heals haven't a dollar to spare for anything like this."

"That's an idea, Silver," Roddy exclaimed with enthusiasm. "I've been wondering what we could do to help out. Old Doc Woodward won't be so hard to satisfy. I can probably fix that myself. But the family is up against it, and without the boy's wages, they'll be in a bad way. I'll speak to Corrie about it. I'm sure she'll take to the idea."

"It would be fun," Silver said. And perhaps wretched for herself, she thought with a pang. Except for the Flathes, a Norwegian family on the south and the Micheners, frugal but free-spirited Germans up near the lake, she had so far made friends of none of the people in and around Heron River.

Roddy turned and looked at her suddenly. "You know—that's the kind of thing that makes you likeable, Silver."

"What kind of thing?"

"You're always thinking about somebody else. The other day in the field, when you tore off your blouse—"

She was smiling at him. "I shall probably grow up to be a nice old maid—loved for my good deeds."

Roddy laughed and put his arm about her shoulder.

"You're a great little kid!" he exclaimed. "After old lady Folds, and then—this bird Lucas cropping up—or I should say flying in—"

"Now, Roddy, please don't start applauding me, or I may cry. Besides—I'll be twenty in November, so I haven't much credit coming to me."

"You will? Well, well! And I suppose Phil Michener thinks you're just about the right age to settle down, eh?"

"Oh, I don't know about that," Silver replied loftily. "I like his sister, and I like him. They are real people, Roddy. They more than make up for—women like Mrs. Folds."

"And men like Gerald Lucas?" There was a curious note in Roddy's voice, half gentle, half embarrassed, the banter gone out of it.

Silver clasped her hands together before her. "Yes," she said. "Although Gerald isn't an evil as Mrs. Folds is, Roddy. He is an evil for me, that's all. Or he was, I should say. But you know by this time that I don't run away from—from that sort of thing—any more."

Roddy cleared his throat. "You were in love with him, weren't you?" he asked abruptly.

For fully a half minute, Silver gazed down upon the wavering shelves of mist.

"I went and stayed at his apartment," she said tonelessly. "For a week or so—while dad was away. Perhaps I was in love with him. I don't know. But now that I am here I know that it wasn't the right kind of love. I must have known that even then, because I wouldn't marry him. Gerald wanted to marry me. He was more decent than I was. He still is, in a way. He fascinated me, but I knew, all the time, underneath, that his life could never be mine. That's all there is to it, Roddy."

At first, Roddy continued to turn the bowl of his pipe about in his hand. Then, slowly, his eyes moved toward the girl beside him.

"Does Phronie know this?" he asked quietly.

"No. I have never told anyone but you. I—I didn't even tell dad the whole truth. I don't know why I've told you this," she went on broodingly. "But it seems to me the land has something to do with it. It has been like telling it to the land—starting over again, honestly. It's hard to explain—"

"I've hardly deserved your confidence," Roddy broke in with a short and ironic laugh. "My feelings toward you have been anything but generous, Silver."

"I think I've understood them, though," she replied thoughtfully.

"When you've worked a piece of land until you have your roots in it—"

He stopped suddenly, and bent toward her with his hand outstretched. "This is just my clumsy way of apologizing to you for being a fool, Silver."

She laid her hand in his and he drew her to her feet. Silver, meeting his eyes, experienced a frightening contraction of her throat. Roddy pressed his lips together and drew a deep breath, as though some profound unease had settled within him.

Together they walked down into the yard, and their simple good night was taken coolly into the silence.

Harry Richter and his sister Evelyn, Corinne reflected with a secret fillip of contempt, were still—and perhaps always would be, in spite of their advantages of money and travel—just a pair of noisy and slightly vulgar cubs. But of course their father owned most of the town of Maynard, and the family mansion there was the pride of the district. Harry and Evelyn cheerfully preferred this "little place on the lake" and even in winter frequently gave week-end parties here.

Corinne sat in a deep chair in the shadowed corner of the sprawling room, and as she gave a sidelong glance at the amused profile of Gerald Lucas, who stood beside her in an indolent, provocative attitude, smoking a cigarette, it seemed to her that Harry's friends were a little pathetic, even rustic. Corinne was coolly excited by the realization that never before in her life had she met anyone so polished, so cynically debonair as Gerald Lucas. She felt, with merely the least thrill of danger, their mutual understanding.

Build Campaign Battle Lines

Washington.—Politics being inseparable from governmental administration under our system, it becomes pertinent at this time to examine what has happened in the late session of congress. In a nation where a two-party political structure obtains, politics cannot be segregated from the administration in the larger sense. It is not with a critical attitude, therefore, that the magnifying glass is held over the doings of President Roosevelt, his cabinet and brain trust advisers and the congress that has lately adjourned.

I believe it will be agreed that politics has predominated in the management of our national affairs during the last eight months especially. The fervor and appeal that was held for recovery by all of us during the earlier days of the Roosevelt administration seems to have been largely dissipated. That is not to say that no one wants to see recovery accomplished. It is to say, however, that this fervor and this appeal has been somewhat subordinated. Thus, it can be summarized in a brief sentence: The administration, looking to the elections of 1936, has been engaged in building campaign battle lines and forging campaign ammunition.

The 1934 congressional elections presented to the country an issue based on the performances and the future program of President Roosevelt. It was accorded a proposition where citizens were voting either to give the New Deal a future mandate and the President authority to proceed as he thought best or to vote a mandate that would call a halt on those same performances and policies. The country supported Mr. Roosevelt, some of his advisers since have told me, in a manner even more substantial than he had anticipated. He emerged from that campaign with a larger Democratic majority in the house than he had before. In addition he was accorded much more than a necessary two-thirds of the senate. The picture looked rosy.

Though the congress that has just ended its session gave the President many anxious hours, I think that on the whole it can be regarded as having provided him with a record of rather arduous and faithful response to his wishes. He did not obtain quite all that he wanted nor did he obtain that portion of his program exactly in the form he desired. But, again, politics in congress is almost a matter of general compromise anyway so that the President can be said to have come out very well. He can proceed now to any plans for that session of congress which convenes next January and which, in accordance with nearly all precedents, will adjourn ahead of the national political conventions next June.

Looking to the Future

Politics being the game that it is, one must look into the future to discover the ultimate goal. So, looking into the future, one discerns several objectives or objectives of decided, as well as important, interest to the individual voters.

In the first place, the consensus surely is that Mr. Roosevelt has built a legislative and administrative structure in our government that presents a concrete and unqualified issue to the American people, namely, to proceed along New Deal lines and make the necessary changes in the Constitution to permit execution of those policies or to throw the whole thing overboard. There can be no equivocation. As the structure stands at this time and as it will stand until the next session of congress is under way, many New Deal propositions are of doubtful constitutionality. If they are so held by the Supreme court of the United States then Mr. Roosevelt is believed certain to turn to the country and request Constitutional revision.

His latest and perhaps his most definite move in this direction was in connection with the so-called Guffey coal bill. It will be recalled that, in placing that piece of legislation on the "must" list of measures to be acted on before congress adjourned, Mr. Roosevelt advised house leaders that he wanted it passed and he did not care particularly whether some members of congress had "reasonable doubts" about its constitutionality. In effect, therefore, the President commanded passage of legislation that must place before the Supreme court a vital question for determination. It will be tested. Of that there is no doubt. If the law is held unconstitutional, it merely means that its provisions form another part of the campaign battleground observed to be shaping.

Mr. Roosevelt also succeeded in forcing through congress the legislation destroying the public utility holding companies. It was a tough fight but the President was victorious. Now, I hear from many sources that court examination of the legislation likewise will come because some folks are convinced it is confiscatory. If it is, it is unconstitutional.

And so it is in the case of several other pieces of legislation enacting New Deal ideas into statutes. One by one, it appears they will get before courts for review.

Thus, the line of cleavage is marked.

While the President has remained silent, neither denying nor confirming the undercurrent of information that I have reported here, one cannot fail to reach the conclusion that if many of the New Deal measures are held invalid, the President and his New Deal supporters, of necessity, must go to the country in the next election seeking constitutional modification to permit the use of policies now inimical to our form of government. That is the issue which the voters will be called upon to decide.

As to the Opposition

Since we have examined the circumstances from the New Deal side, let us likewise see what the Republicans and other oppositionists are doing. Lately, I have talked with some of the recognized Republican wheel horses. Whether they speak the sentiment of the masses of Republican voters or whether they voiced only their own views is not important here. Political straws do show which way the political winds are blowing. So when these veterans of many political battles say that they welcome the creation by the New Dealers of an issue, they evidently see in the situation worthwhile opportunities. When they say that they are willing to go to the country in defense of the Constitution as it stands and the traditions it represents, they evidently feel they are on firm ground.

Much water can go over the dam between now and November, 1936, and much sentiment can be changed in that time. But the Republicans thus far have done very little in the way of building up their case. While they appear to be enthusiastic about their chances against Mr. Roosevelt in 1936, they have thus far failed to develop even a nucleus of an organization.

It may be their strategy not to start their cannonading too early. Indeed, I have heard the thought expressed that it would be unwise to use ammunition too far in advance. At any rate, there have been only a scattered few direct attacks on what certainly must be the issue of 1936, the question of revision or retention of our Constitution. It is to be noted in this connection that those Republicans who have let go with a few shots have been of the ultraconservative type. I think it is generally agreed that the Republican set-up next year will be managed not by the old ultraconservatives but by those who have pulled away to some extent and who are willing to admit that times have changed conditions and a new model, perhaps not streamlined, is necessary.

G. O. P. Bides Its Time

One argument advanced why Republican leadership has not been more active is that if a start is made too early, the Roosevelt administration will have an opportunity to answer all of the criticism. Said one Republican leader: "We would be utterly foolish to permit the New Dealers to know all of our arguments too far in advance. I, for one, am content to let them proceed with their socialistic regimentation because I know that every time a calf is given too much rope, it chokes itself to death."

Then there is another factor which I understand is responsible for the delay in Republican attacks. A good many Republicans have a hope, at least, that a campaign based on a plea for maintenance of our Constitution and the traditions and modes of living which it represents will draw to the Republican candidate a certain segment of Democrats who are unsympathetic with the New Deal. There has been plenty of evidence in the session of congress just adjourned that at heart numerous Democrats lean to the conservative as distinguished from the New Deal method of government. The closing hours of the congressional session seemed to belie this. But anyone who mingled among old time Democrats in the house could not fail to have observed existence of a doubt as to the wisdom of many New Deal policies. Those men were forced to line up behind the Presidential program not because they believed in it fully but for two other reasons. These reasons were: first, they still entertained some fear that if they broke with the President it might mean their political defeat for renomination and re-election, and second, they were harassed and physically and mentally tired and wanted to go home.

The late summer and fall months during which these representatives and senators naturally will be among their constituents is rather likely to provide them with a better knowledge of where they stand. They will come back next January either convinced that they must tie fast to the New Deal or they will be more obstreperous than they have been in the recent session. If the strength appears to be on the Roosevelt side, the next session of congress will be simply a rubber stamp for the Chief Executive. If, on the other hand, they find that the enthusiasm for the New Deal has waned, I think it is fair to predict that the next session of congress will be one of the most troublesome with which any President has yet been confronted.

People's Column

Congress has adjourned. Roosevelt has discovered that Russia is plotting to overthrow our country. For these favors, oh Lord let us be timely thankful, but why tell Russia to stop and yet make no effort to stop the reds in this country. His own political family are practicing Communism. Wallace, Ickes, Perkins and others close to the administration are our worst enemies.

Old Age Pension

Probably the worst crime committed by this congress was the act of Hughie Long, just for spite in killing the appropriation for the payment of the old age pension. I understand that President Roosevelt has stated that he will take the money from some other department to pay the pension and if he does, he will receive the blessings of millions of old people who are in need. As for Hughie Long, if that is his idea of 100 per cent Americanism, I don't want any of it.

I am sorry that the administration has seen fit to scrap the Democratic platform to build up a party of their own, a party composed of renegade Democrats and galvanized Republicans; who don't give a Continental d-m for party or people.

Speaking plain English the Democratic party is rotten to the core, the Republican party is even worse if possible, but the Roosevelt party is so damnable rotten that they are not fit for a self person to associate with.

I think an effort is being made to start Carter Glass for nomination for president as he is an out standing figure in the Democratic party. In the East there are many good Republicans and also many good Democrats but their chances for nomination are very slim.

What seems strange to me is the fact that the leaders thought the middle west and the south can't understand that with the starting up of the great industries of the east that good times would come again, not as before the war, but enough to put Americans to work. The aliens should be sent back to their own countries.

Electricity Plays Important Part

Model Milk Room on Crete Farm

Mrs. George Ohlendorf in the milk room of the "Neatest Farm". The electrical motor for pumping the deep well water which cools the milk can be seen on the floor at the right.

Nineteen years ago George Ohlendorf and his bride settled on a 167 acre farm near Crete, Illinois. As Mr. Ohlendorf expresses it, the farm was "nothing but a mud hole." Almost two decades later the Ohlendorf place was chosen by the Pure Milk Association from over 200 entrants as the "neatest dairy farm" in three states, Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin, a monument to George Ohlendorf's perseverance and to the ingenuity of modern science in the development of electrical labor-saving devices.

Farmer Ohlendorf is a staunch believer in the use of electricity to perform the many tasks of a dairy farmer. In a spotlessly clean barn his herd of 12 Swiss cows is housed, with every modern convenience, even to electric fans to keep them cool during warm weather. The milk cooling and aerating is done by cool water and fresh deep well water is constantly at hand through the efforts of an electric pump. All grain is ground with a power grinder. Electric lights and a radio complete the transformation of the barn into a "bovine parlor". Mr. Ohlendorf has not stated whether the radio in his barn is to entertain the cows or to keep them posted on world news.

From the landscaped entrance to the artistically decorated rock garden this farm conveys the impression of lavish expenditures, but on the contrary every improvement was made by Mr. Ohlendorf and his wife at a minimum of cost. Mr. and Mrs. Ohlendorf employ practically no outside labor on their place, their "hired hands" being electrical appliances.

On commenting on the neatness and efficiency of the Ohlendorf farm Richard Boonstra, agricultural engineer of the Public Service Company of northern Illinois emphasized the important part played by electricity.

"Mr. Ohlendorf", he said "has made many uses of the facilities which electricity offers for the modern farm and farm home. The recently liberalized arrangement for bringing electricity to northern Illinois farms, not now reached by power lines, will make these same labor-saving facilities and home conveniences far more widely available in the coming year."

Sixty-two farms out of the original 230 entrants qualified in the "Neatest Farm Contest" with a grade of 90 or over and were awarded plaques. The farm of John T. Cooper at Orland was awarded second place and M. P. Lies' farm at Naperville, third.

The judges were Dean Chris L. Christensen, University of Wisconsin, Dr. H. A. Ruche, University of Illinois and Dr. H. W. Gregory of Purdue university.

"George Washington Tubbs," said the judge, sternly, "you're entirely no-account and shiftless—and I'm going to send you away for a year with hard labor."

"Please, Judge," interrupted Mrs. Tubbs from the rear of the courtroom, "will yo' Honah jes kinder split dat sentence? Don't send him away from home, but let dat hard labor stand."

IT WAS hard to believe that the thing was actually happening. The Lee MacReadys, who had never been west before, thought such dramas only occurred in fiction. Mrs. MacReady uttered a little suppressed scream of fright and pointed toward the gap. "Lee! They're going to hold up the stage! Oh, why did you ever insist on leaving the main automobile road and driving into this dreadful country?"

"Because," said Lee, "nothing exciting was happening on the main automobile road and we came west looking for atmosphere, didn't we?" He tried to sound jovial, but his lips were white.

Above them and to the right an old-fashioned Concord stage coach, pulled by four horses and with two men perched on the box, had rocked into view and was descending the slope. Beyond, to the left, a band of horsemen, shouting and flourishing guns, had dashed from behind the shelter of a pile of boulders and was racing madly to intercept the vehicle's progress.

Mrs. MacReady screamed when one of the men aboard the stage fired toward the approaching horseman. The driver began whipping up his horses as answering shots came from the bandits. The stage swayed precariously as it swept down the slope.

Mrs. MacReady grasped her husband's arm and squeezed fiercely. "Lee!" she screamed. "We're right in the way! The stage is heading for the road, and we'll likely be shot. Hurry!"

But Lee didn't need to be urged. He had estimated the spot where the final showdown would take place, slightly to the rear of where they were now located. His foot bore down on the accelerator and he bent grimly over the wheel. But speed was something to be wished for and not attained, for the road was unpaved and rutty, much more suited to shod hoofs than rubber tires.

They went bouncing at what seemed a terrific pace, yet couldn't have been more than 20 miles an hour because the stage, having gained the roadway, was tearing along almost at their rear bumper. Behind the stage came the bandits, shouting furiously for the coach to halt and emphasizing their demands with volley after volley of shots.

Looking back, Mrs. MacReady suddenly said tensely: "Lee! Something's gone wrong. There's another band of horsemen following after the bandits!"

They Went Bouncing at What Seemed to be a Terrific Pace, the Stage Tearing Along Almost at their Rear Bumper.

"Probably the sheriff and his posse!" Lee replied. Abruptly his face brightened. "There's a town!" he cried. "We're safe!"

"Maybe," his wife answered. "If that's a posse the bandits are caught between two fires and we're in the thick of it."

Lee didn't reply. He had jammed home the accelerator, risking broken springs and axles in order to gain the sanctity of the huddle of buildings which loomed ahead, before a careless bullet pierced him between the shoulder blades.

The town was alive with men, all carrying guns and all rushing about aimlessly. As the MacReadys swept down the street, puffs of smoke began to jet out from windows and behind doors. The sound of shooting mingled with the shouts of men, the roar of the MacReady motor and the rumble of the stage, was deafening.

Lee saw a sign that read "Hotel," and skidded to a stop. "Quick. In-side! It looks as though this fight has just begun!"

They raced up the steps. A door opened and they ran for it. Inside a bearded man, holding a rifle and with six-shooters strapped about his waist, grinned at them. "Just made it, eh?" "Ca—can you hide us?" Mrs. MacReady asked.

The man with the beard eyed them uncertainly a moment. "O. K. Come with me."

He led the way up a flight of stairs. "You'll be O. K. in here," he said, opening a door.

The MacReadys looked around. They were in a scantily furnished hotel bedroom. Two windows faced on the street, and from beneath them came a bedlam of sounds. Already it had begun to grow dark, and the flashes of rifles and sixguns were plainly visible.

"Stay close to the farther wall," Lee said, "I'll close the blinds." He crept across the floor, reached up and pulled down the shades. Then he wriggled back to a position beside his wife. Terrified, clutching at each other, they huddled on the floor there. Hours passed, or a period that seemed like hours. Outside the shooting continued, but as darkness settled it grew less intense and finally ceased. There was the sound of running feet and much shouting. The MacReadys heard someone say: "Lynchings!" And the cry was immediately taken up and repeated by a dozen throats.

Minutes later a dull glow showed against the curtain. Lee crawled across the floor and peeped out. "They've hung three men!" he reported. His face was white. "And they've built a fire and are celebrating!"

Mrs. MacReady gasped and slumped forward. Lee picked her up and carried her to the bed. After a while she regained consciousness, but was too weak to move. Lee lay down beside her and did what he could to be a comfort. A long interval passed, and then the red glow grew faint and died. The sound of shouting diminished and presently there was stillness. For the first time Lee relaxed. He lay for a long time, expecting to hear footsteps approaching their room, or a renewal of the hubbub in the street. At length, overcome by complete exhaustion, the MacReadys slept.

Day had come when they awoke. Lee climbed off the bed and timidly lifted up the curtain. It was somewhat of a shock to discover a quiet, unassuming and peaceful country; hard to believe that the horrors of the night before had actually taken place here. A hundred yards up the street three limp bodies swung in the breeze. Lee shuddered and turned away.

"Come on," he said. "Let's get out of here."

Below stairs a pleasant-faced young man was standing behind the desk. It was only when he spoke that the MacReadys recognized their host of last night, without his beard. He smiled at them.

"Enjoy our little celebration?" he asked. "I gave you the only front room we had left, so you could get a good view."

Lee merely stared. "Celebration?" he said, sounding ridiculously like an echo.

The young man nodded. "Of course, being from the East, you wouldn't know about Dusty Rembrandt. Worst bandit this section of the country ever knew. Twenty-five years ago today he was captured and hung with two of his henchmen. We celebrate the event every year by staging a pageant exactly as it happened on that memorable day. Those dummies you see hanging in the square represent Rembrandt and his lieutenants. The old stage is the one used to bait the outlaws into town. Sheriff Wells, the man who made the capture, led yesterday's posse." The young man laughed. "It's a great day here. All the men grow beards and the women wear calico dresses. The affair winds up with a bonfire and then a dance at the circle R ranch."

Lee gulped and stared at his wife. Mrs. MacReady said: "Then—then it wasn't real?"

The young man shook his head. "Looked almost real, didn't it?" he said proudly.

An hour later the MacReadys bumped out of town in their car and on their faces were expressions difficult to describe. Presently they came to a crossroad and Lee pulled up. "We'd better turn here," he said, "and get back to the main automobile route. It'll be easier driving and I guess things of exciting nature are just as apt to happen there as any place."

Mrs. MacReady nodded sadly. There was disappointment in her face. "I guess so," she said.

Science Seeks Enduring Paint Used by Indians

Mysterious Indian "spirit" pictures have given a clue to a paint which can withstand exposure to weather for hundreds of years, states a Washington Press correspondent.

The Smithsonian institution recently announced that Dr. John P. Harrington, ethnologist, will visit southern California to study the basic ingredients used in Indian drawings on mountain cliffs which still retain their original luster 150 years after they were painted.

According to Indian legends, the pictures were painted by spirits of the dead. Investigation revealed that the work was done at night by medicine men.

On an expedition among the Mission Indians of southern California last fall, Doctor Harrington found that an oil pressed from the seeds of a rare species of wild cucumber was used in mixing the paint.

Doctor Harrington will try to find enough of these cucumber seeds to obtain a supply of oil for experimental purposes. From a chemical analysis, it may be possible to find out the remarkable element which enabled the crude Indian paintings to last through more than a century's diverse weather conditions.

The Indians obtained the oil through the simple process of crushing it out of the seeds with a stone pestle. Formerly, these cucumber plants were fairly common all over the United States, but now they are a botanical rarity. The Indians obtained five colors—red, white, yellow, black and blue—by mixing the oil with clay and minerals found in southern California.

Indian women also use the oil of this wild cucumber as a sunburn lotion. In spite of their red skins, the women burn readily when exposed for long periods to the summer sun. Apparently the oil has the ability of absorbing the harmful rays in the sunlight.

Lesson for September 8

LYDIA AND PRISCILLA

LESSON TEXT—Acts 16:11-15; 18:1-8, 24-28.

GOLDEN TEXT—Give her of the fruit of her hands; and let her works praise her in the gates.—Proverbs 31:21.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Meeting Out of Doors.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Meeting by the River Side.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Serving God in Our Daily Work.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Women in Industrial Life.

The central teaching of this lesson does not so much concern Christian women in industrial life as it does the gospel of Christ finding them while in the pursuit of their chosen callings.

1. The Conversion of Lydia (Acts 16:11-15).

So far as recorded, she was the first convert in Europe and in a real sense hers is a typical conversion. Observe the steps therein.

1. Attendance at the place of prayer (v. 13). There being no synagogue here, the accustomed place of prayer was at the river side. The accustomed place today is the church. However, the worship of God is not restricted to set places.

2. Listening to the preaching of the Word of God (v. 14). Paul took advantage of the opportunity afforded him by the assemblage of this group of devoted women to preach Christ to them. He was always alert and prized highly the opportunity to tell the people about Christ.

3. Her heart was opened by the Lord (v. 14). The individual may place himself near to the means of grace and the preacher may preach the Word of God, but there is no hope of salvation till the heart is opened by the Lord (John 6:44, 45). While the salvation of everyone is dependent upon this sovereign act of God, yet we can be sure that he is willing at all times to do this for those who place themselves in the way of saving grace.

4. She was baptized (v. 15). The ordinance of baptism follows belief in Christ. The invariable rule in the early church was for believers to be baptized. While there is no salvation in the water of baptism, yet hearty obedience should be rendered in this respect.

5. She brought her household to Christ (v. 15). This was as it always should be.

6. Her expression of gratitude (v. 15). She thus showed signs of the new life in showing gratitude to those who had been instrumental in her conversion by constraining them to share the hospitality of her home.

II. Aquila and Priscilla in Corinth (Acts 18:1-3).

1. Why there (v. 1). They were expelled from Rome by the cruel edict of Claudius against the Jews.

2. What they were doing (v. 3). Though recently arrived, they had already settled down to the pursuit of their trade, the making of tents.

3. Paul finding a home (v. 3). While carrying on an evangelistic campaign in Corinth and needing work for his support, he found a job at his trade in the shop with Aquila and Priscilla. It was perhaps as he plied the needle that he related to his fellow workmen the wonderful story of his salvation.

4. Valued helpers to Paul. He more than found a home with them; he found priceless fellow-workers of the gospel. This was a most devoted couple. They are never mentioned separately.

III. Aquila and Priscilla Instructing Apollos (Acts 18:24-28).

Having been instructed by Paul, they were able not only to discern Apollos' lack of understanding of the gospel but to expound to him the way of God more perfectly. Here is a case where an eloquent preacher and mighty in the Scriptures was perfected in instruction by a humble couple of manual laborers.

IV. Aquila and Priscilla Were Active Christian Workers (Rom. 16:3).

Perhaps because of business success they occupied a place of prominence in the community, but they were pre-eminently known as zealous workers for Christ.

V. Aquila and Priscilla Endangered Their Lives for Paul (Rom. 16:4).

They seemed at some critical time to have endangered their lives for Paul's sake. They were so loyal to Paul that they are described as having been actually martyred for him.

VI. Aquila and Priscilla Had a Sanctified Home (Rom. 16:5).

When poverty and persecution made the house of worship impossible, the home of this godly couple became the meeting place of the saints. A private home may be made a sacred edifice and is so indeed when the saints gather there to worship God.

Work

Do your work—not just your work and no more, but a little more for the lavishing of the sake; that little more which is worth all the rest. And if you suffer as you must, and if you doubt as you must, do your work. Put your heart into it and the sky will clear. Then out of your very doubt and suffering will be born the supreme joy of life.—Dean Briggs.

Different Ways
of Making Rugs

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

The making of rag rugs has interested needleworkers for hundreds of years. One very good reason for this is that rugs are practical and wanted in every home. The larger the rug the harder the work; the weight increases as the work progresses. Making a rug of motifs and then assembling takes the hard labor out of rug making and the work becomes interesting. Work these motifs in spare time at home or elsewhere and, when all are finished, assemble.

Folder No. 532 contains a lot of information about making the hexagon motif in various sizes in hexagon shaped rugs and in various color combinations. Hexagon motifs are crocheted in any size and color scheme according to your own idea. Amount of material and all the stitches are given and other hints of value to rug makers. A new kind of chart for selecting your colors gives you an opportunity to see what your rug looks like before you go ahead with the work. You can get some wonderful ideas from this folder on "Different Ways to Make Rugs." It will be mailed to you upon receipt of 10 cents.

Out in Front

"Are you a political leader?" "How do I know?" asked Senator Sorghum. "I'm out in front, but maybe I'm only being pushed from behind by a stampede."

When to Stand and When to SitGood Form and Etiquette Regulates Amenities of Social Life.

To know when to stand and when to sit down is something that enters into the amenities of social life. There is an etiquette about it which extends farther, and becomes a matter of patriotic expression, and of the courtesies of concert halls. The correct practice of these seeming trifles is an evidence of good breeding, and so becomes important. There are times when boys and girls, and men and women all follow the same customs in these observances. Also there are times when boys and men follow one set of rules, while adult women follow another.

In school children are taught to stand when the flag is saluted, and this practice continues throughout life. They are also taught to stand when the national anthem is sung and when they hear it sung. These are patriotic observances. The pupils would be reprimanded if careless about these rules. When traveling in foreign countries the same rule holds. Each country expects its citizens to show this respect to the emblem and the voice of the native land as thus expressed.

One of the immediate evidences of good breeding is standing of men in the presence of women. They remain standing until all the women in the room are seated. Boys are instructed either at home or the best boys' schools that immediately a woman enters, whether young or old, to spring to their feet. When they are older they continue to rise, but by that time they have acquired an easy and accustomed manner, rising and seating themselves unobtrusively, so that if a lady remains standing, rather long, they do not appear too formal.

Since boys and men remain standing as mentioned, women should be very careful to seat themselves without unnecessary delay. I have seen young women, occasionally, stand chatting so long with one or another of the men, or women that it was very awkward for the other men in the group to remain standing gracefully. The women should never be unmindful of their rules any more than should the men.

A man always rises, when a woman is introduced to him, whether he is out of doors or in, or seated at a table, as sometimes happens in restaurants when one group greets another. The men should rise as soon as party halts by the table, if there are ladies in the group. Women rise for introductions to other women, but not necessarily when men are presented. It is no breach of etiquette either way, except to remain seated when an elderly woman is presented. By the way, if the man is one of distinction, the woman, especially if young, is presented to him, which is a reversal of the custom.

In concert halls when the leader of a symphony enters it is correct form for the audience, both men and women, to rise.

Personalities

"We must share the wealth!" said the oratorical person.

"Yes," answered Senator Sorghum, "but it's hard to do. While taking care of the masses we are compelled to admit that it is always some kind of a rugged individualist who can be sure of a first-class funeral and a big monument."

What Happens
When the Railroad
Leaves A Community

C. L. Ruppert, superintendent of the Rock Island railroad has sent the following interesting letter to all agents along the road:

ALL AGENTS:

As a matter of information I quote the following editorial entitled "Good Old Railroad!" which appeared in the Mason City, Iowa
Globe-Gazette of July 11, 1935:

"What happens when railroad facilities are lost to a community or region is being illustrated just now over in northeastern Nebraska.

"About two years ago, on the showing of unprofitable operation the Omaha railroad was permitted by the interstate commerce commission to abandon a 50 mile branch line between Sioux City and Wynot, Neb. Much of its business had been lost to truckers and it was reasoned that the remainder could be handled in this manner without great sacrifice by shippers. The year of grace allowed by the I. C. C. was allowed to expire by the communities served by that branch line and the tracks torn up.

"Here we take up the story as it was presented to the Grain and Feed Review of Minneapolis:

"The truckers assured the townspeople and the farmers that they would be entirely able to fill their transportation needs. They pointed out that the bulk of the transportation service was already in their hands and that they could handle what little remained.

"Now let us see what has happened in this sioux city-Wynot territory. First of all the grain rate by rail to Sioux City and the east was three cents per hundred from the farthest point on the line. Now the rate is ten cents a bushel to Sioux City. Coal was laid down in the furthest town for twenty cents a ton, while at present truckers are offering to deliver coal to close-in points at two dollars a ton. Farm values have depreciated from 50 per cent to 75 per cent. Some farmers are fifty miles from a railroad.
Homes in the towns erected at a cost of $4,000 are begging for buyers at levels as low as $500 and there are no buyers. Lastly the Omaha road paid $28,000 each year in taxes and this sum has been shifted over to the remaining taxpayers.

"This is not a nice picture, yet if the rural merchants and the rural community does not awaken, it is a scene that is going to be enacted in scores of towns that are today thriving trading points."

"The moral of this little tale is that America must begin to give greater recognition to the important role played by railroads in its business structure, as a direct servant and as a stabilizer and check on transportation rates in competing agencies."

Choir Practice—Friday 8 p. m.
Following the custom of last year we remind the Choir that Sunday
after Labor Day is "After Vacation Call", and to every member comes the Call, clear and distinct, for lay-alty and whole-hearted response at the rehearsal this Friday at 8 p. m.
We remind you that a child of God will be anxious to use his voice, if God has blessed him with voice-talent, for the glory of His cause. It is a most sacred privilege to be intrusted to lead in Public Worship in God's House.
